

While I absolutely hate the idea of the person sitting next to me being allowed to blabber away on the cell phone - I have on rare occassion wished that I could use my cell phone rather than the high priced seat back phone. I would prefer the FCC lift this restriction and I will work with my preferred airlines to offer "quiet" flights and/or sections. I frequently use public transportation (trains and buses) and have to deal with loud talking, rude behavior etc - regulation doesn't fix this problem.
